Introduction to Russian Adoption

Adoption from Russia is subject to the laws of the Russian Federation as governed by their family code. Russia is not a party to the Hague Treaty on International adoptions, but in the past year, Russian officials have entered into discussions with the US Department of State to ensure that agencies are properly overseen in the US.

Presently, international adoption may be accomplished on the territory of the Russian Federation with the assistance of an adoption agency that is accredited by the Russian Federation. BEACON HOUSE is one such agency, having received the most recent and non-expiring re-accreditation in January of 2008. Beacon House has been working in Russia since 1998 and has been accredited since 2001, when the Russian Federation first required such status of agencies.

Beacon House is also HAGUE accredited through COA, so that any issues that may come up despite Russia's non-Hague status can be handled through either/both accreditations.

Russia

Russia splintered in the 20th century into 14 independent countries and Russia proper. Due to the economic difficulties during the 20th century, Russia remains a country struggling with a population unsupported. The most significant result has been the breakdown of family. Children without parental care reside in orphanages and become available for adoption in accordance with the laws of the territory.

Adopting from Eastern Europe requires certain educational, cultural, medical, and mental health awareness in order to prepare for the possible issues that may arise (1) once you are presented with a possible referral, and (2) once adoptive parents are home with their child. Expectations play a large role in the success or failure of any international adoption.

Proper preparation is critical to the success of the placement. Beacon House fees include the cost of training from Heart of the Matter Seminars, providing online classes that comply with the Hague requirements for adoptive parent preparation. Beacon House requires that adoptive parents engage in this training as part of our program. It is important to develop an understanding of international adoption, the children being adopted, identifying expectations, reviewing medical issues, addressing cultural differences, issues specific to Russia and other areas which, if prepared, significantly increases the transition of the child into the family and thus the success of the adoption.

Beacon House also affiliates with the International Adoption Clinic at the University of Alabama, where the staff includes multidisciplinary professionals to evaluate and assist children. UAB offers pre-and post adoption evaluations and services. Dr. Jennifer Chambers is the head of the international adoption clinic and UAB offers online classes to help prepare adoptive parents.

“Choosing the right agency was very hard. We did our best in researching but also we had to take a leap of faith. From our first call to the agency through being home with our boy, Beacon House exceeded our expectations.” Stella and Steve

"Thank you again for all your help. I would like to applaud your agency for the work you do; we have not had such service as this and it is refreshing. Brenda, 5th adoption"

PROGRAM PARTICULARS

Children who are available for international adoption are those who are determined to be “orphans” by virtue of any of the following: voluntary relinquishment of parental rights, involuntary termination of parental rights, or death of parents. In Russia, there is the additional requirement that the child be placed on the Russian Regional and Federal databank for children without parents for at least eight months.

Children eligible for adoption in Russian reside in orphanages. Most orphanages have a physician on staff and children are routinely tested for Hepatitis, TB, HIV and other common medical issues. Caregivers generally take good care of children and make the most of available resources. These resources often only provide the most basic necessities.

Children Available

- ✚ Age: 10 months to 15 years
- ✚ Gender: Both boys and girls
- ✚ Children are ethnically diverse; may be Caucasian, Asian, Tartar, or Roma
- ✚ Health: Many children are healthy, some have minor correctable issues and some have special needs
- ✚ Time frames: Boys under 2 years: 4-6 months from time documents are submitted in country and girls under two years 8-9 months from time documents have been submitted.
- ✚ Referrals: Referrals are officially made by the MOE in Russia. Local representatives may unofficially identify a region where a child may be available. Depending on the region where the child is identified, medical background and other information may or may not be available prior to travel.

Eligibility: Adoptive Parents

- ✚ Marital Status: Married couples and single women can adopt. Previous divorces accepted.
- ✚ Age: Singles must be at least 25 years old. In general, the child adopted must be no more than 45 years younger than the youngest parent. Some regions are more flexible on age than others.
- ✚ Children: No limitations on other children in the home.

Travel

- ✚ In general, two trips to Russia are required.
- ✚ Timeframe: The timeframe for any adoption depends on many factors, including the time for completing paperwork, the region your child is in, USCIS approval, and how soon you identify a child. We estimate the time frame to be 12-15 months from the time your documents are first in Russia.

TRAVEL TO RUSSIA

The time spent in Russia is truly a trip of a lifetime and provides a wonderful opportunity to get to know your child and experience Russian culture that is rich with history and the arts. Optional sightseeing may include concerts, the ballet, museum tours, souvenir shopping or visiting some of the most beautiful cathedrals in the world. During your trip, bilingual Russian Representatives are always available to guide you through the entire adoption process.

In general, you will be making two (2) trips to Russia. In most cases, you will fly to Moscow, Russia. In Moscow, you will be met by BHAS personnel. Someone will meet you at the airport with a card bearing your name. BHAS personnel will take you where you need to go and ensure that you do not miss your domestic flights. You will be given emergency phone numbers in case there are flight delays.

Typically, you will meet with the DE on your day of arrival in the region. Visits to the orphanage will commence the next day. On your first visit to the orphanage you will meet the orphanage director and doctor, when you will have the opportunity to receive a great deal of background on the child medical and social history. You should be prepared with a list of questions, as this may be the only chance you have to ask these. Beacon House can assist you in this preparation.

The Ministry of Education will expect you to make a decision about proceeding with adoption by the end of your first trip. The best way to be in a position to make that decision while in Russia is to arrive ready to make observations about the child, listen to the child's history – medical and social – take pictures and if possible, video of the child. There are checklists available to take with you to assess developmental milestones, measurements, and other information will be given to you. We can provide recommendations of knowledgeable international adoption doctors who can assist you while you are in Russia. Part of our program is to provide information on these physicians early in the process for pre-adoption services.

For your second trip to Russia, court trips are vastly different from region to region. You will visit the orphanage prior to attending the court hearing. The 10 day waiting period can be expected to be business days, although in some cases it may be calendar days.

Once regional paperwork is complete and the waiting period has elapsed, you will travel to Moscow to obtaining your child's visa and consulate registration. It takes approximately two business days to obtain the child's visa from the US Embassy and two more to have the child registered at the Russian Consulate. Once these requirements have been met, you may take your child home.

The following information is accurate for the calendar year 2011:

BHAS provides adoption services in the US and Russia in accordance with applicable Russian Federation, US federal and state law [in the states where licensed]. BHAS has the following programs available to prospective adoptive parents:

- Domestic adoption
- Adoption from the Russian Federation

BHAS is a non-denominational organization that provides adoption services without regard to race, religion, creed, national origin or sex.

General eligibility criteria for prospective adoptive parents vary with the program:

- For domestic adoptions, adoptive parents must be at least 25 years old, a married couple or single woman.
- BHAS does not accept single men for adoption.
- Same sex couples may not adopt.
